It is used to NUMB AREAS that would otherwise FEEL PAIN.

ADRENALINE
is a naturally-occurring chemical produced in the body. One of its many effects is to constrict blood vessels, through its action on the adrenergic receptors found in the walls of blood vessels. It is used to slow the dispersal, and thereby prolong the effect, of local anaesthetics.

LIGNOCAINE belongs to two groups of medicines known as local anaesthetics and antiarrhythmic drugs. Local anaesthetics stop pain and feeling in the area around where it is injected; and antiarrhythmic drugs work by restoring irregular and/or rapid heart beats to normal.
